

Scott Morrison is Dead PM Walking

by darcy Friday, Aug 24 2018, 10:19pm

international / prose / post

Hardly a victory for un-elected, new PM Scott Morrison, who has been 'sold the dump' of a future backlash against the party by Australian voters. The conservative push to oust former PM Turnbull, led by arch-conservatives Peter Dutton, Tony Abbott and Eric Abetz was/is a completely SUICIDAL play, as that rebellion within the party has done more to kill-off any chance of mild success at the next federal poll -- it's over for the conservatives that thought more of internal petty power plays and themselves than SERVING the nation and its struggling population, and the people are sorely aware of it.

Smug Scott Morrison, saleable my arse!

It was the conservatives that made a HUGE political issue of Labor, now in opposition, when it descended into the exact same infighting, and consequently the conservatives won the federal poll in a LANDSLIDE. Now the Liberals, who SHOULD KNOW better, have no excuses whatsoever, as with FULL knowledge of the political consequences of their horrifying and stunningly STUPID bickering, couldn't help but fall into the same political-suicide trap, and no 'sales' gimmick has a chance of altering the public view. Aussies may well wonder whether politicians have a memory that spans more than a day of infighting and bickering in Canberra.

So today the outcome for Morrison, who is considered "saleable" by other conservative colleagues desperately hoping to keep their seats, is simply a delay to the "guillotine," as NOTHING could save the conservative party from the political wilderness.

So sitting conservatives may as well begin packing their bags and searching for new careers, as it would be a considerable time in the political wilderness before the public forgets the squalid, self-interested antics of this reprehensible political party when CLEARLY it was ITS responsibility to serve the national, NOT personal interest -- notwithstanding the effect on Oz internationally, Australia has been going backwards in comparative terms to all other developed nations in almost all areas. Well done INEPT, conservative IDIOTS!

I have nothing more to say and would happily defer to the extra-loud 'voice' of the AUSTRALIAN PEOPLE at the next federal election. Though I would also warn against any form of major party support, they have BOTH PROVEN they are not fit to COMPETENTLY serve the nation.

Installing, in LARGE NUMBERS, genuine REPRESENTATIVE, independent politicians in BOTH houses that are not shackled by the dysfunctional major parties is without doubt the best option, at least in avoiding the counter-productive pitfalls of a revolving, two-party adversarial system that fails to produce the goods and debilitates Australia's standing in the international arena -- notwithstanding it also creates unnecessarily harsh economic circumstances for one of the wealthiest, per head of population, nations in the WORLD. Both major parties in that regard are MISERABLE FAILURES and the PEOPLE have unnecessarily suffered as a result of GROSS political INCOMPETENCE.

[Please share this piece with other concerned Aussie CITIZENS and make it known that our insular politicians are accountable to the PEOPLE.]

Inverse Times Open Publishing. <http://inversetimes.lingama.net/news/story-242.html>