

The Failure of Existing Political Systems and the Resulting Social Suicide

by Lynn Saturday, Sep 8 2018, 8:50pm

international / prose / post

Social theorists whether of right, left or centre have lost touch with reality. Today the overwhelming threat we face is the devastating effect of climate disruption, yet no social theorist breaches the subject, notwithstanding that communism has failed and capitalism is indeed primarily responsible for environmental, extreme climate disruptions and constant war/exploitation of the weak. Is this the world we want, a world in which entire societies fail? I hope not.

Already the mega-wealthy are buying land in New Zealand and other remote locations and installing multi-million dollar bunkers which are sold by a Texas company to elites for installation anywhere in the world. They know what lies ahead more than most as it is they that created the disastrous scenario and I caution, playing the blame game now would be counter-productive as we ALL face imminent catastrophe on a GLOBAL scale and so must deal directly with the problem/s we face. However, I have no sympathy whatsoever for these elites and the sooner they are disposed of the better, they are all marked for elimination by their own filthy hands.

It is clearly the lack of group participation that has pushed the world to the precipice. Indeed, we are all to blame for this failure and therefore must take responsibility or die in stages, the poor and the weak would be the first casualties and yet they are the world's overwhelming majority and should therefore rise up and take control of their existing, elite serving corporate controlled governments, those entities have long passed their use-by dates and are now in the process of jumping ship. So if we must act against them better NOW because there may be NO later!

In fact we must COLLECTIVELY act together if we choose to survive. Capitalism/exploitation and profit at all costs, with its variants, have clearly failed the majority, and to think, without any opposition from communism or socialism, notwithstanding those tried systems are also unsustainable though would have persisted a little longer. However, do not distract yourselves with social theories and old failed models, which essentially all reduce to failed 'leaders and follower' systems. Today we must work together as ONE if we hope to survive on a tenable planet. And as is evident working as one, each according to their skills, is the ultimate form of social participation and cures what I consider to be the main cause of social failure, division/competition that leads to corruption and criminal hierarchies and the alienation of individuals from the group, which social disease the world is PLAGUED with today. All old systems based on leaders and hierarchies have CLEARLY failed, therefore working as one, each according to their specialised skills and then sharing EQUALLY in all benefits/outcomes is the ONLY solution that approaches harmony and sustainability.

Now beware, meandering off into theoretical social models is a distraction, which destroyed the 'Occupy' movement, all focus must be addressed to the practical, and that means ACTION not sitting around 'occupying.' This is NO TIME for passivity, or any other counter-productive dream/fantasy, we must FIGHT to survive today, or continue to die slowly under existing corrupt, failed systems, then die quickly when the real shit hits the fan. Indeed, once people begin to cooperate on any venture the success of that simple fool proof solution would become evident to others, and so abandon all antiquated, non-productive thinking if you wish to survive. The only factors to guard against is the formation of elite structures, though I am not referring to organisation, which is a must, though (policy) determined by PARTICIPANTS and majority vote or approval, groups necessarily form as a result of function/task, however, no group should ever be dominant, all benefits are to SHARED EQUALLY, which prevents ruling elites forming. It is not a difficult proposition to undertake as the benefits and quick results would be obvious. PARTICIPATE if you wish to survive and avoid/reduce the coming social, environmental, and economic catastrophes which are nigh upon us NOW.

Also be aware that organised religion is a massively destructive, parasitic and motivation destroying influence which tenets are largely responsible for today's in-harmonious nihilistic world; be guided from within and nature, as you and nature already know that harmony leads to LIFE, and that knowledge is INNATE. Do not be beguiled or led by anybody, ideology or doctrine if you wish to be free and prosper.

And NOW, in conclusion, be aware that there is nothing written above that you do not already understand and KNOW.

Peace and much joy.

[The more we share these thoughts the better for ALL, please assist in that regard.]

<https://www.counterpunch.org/2018/09/07/billionaires-plan-escape-from-apocalypse/>

Inverse Times Open Publishing. <http://inversetimes.lingama.net/news/story-279.html>