

Trump May Precipitate A War Between Pakistan and Afghanistan to Save His Presidency

by cyd Tuesday, Nov 20 2018, 11:35pm

international / prose / post

In a couple of weeks Democrats would take over the House of Reps, which would result in Trump's paralysis as president and he knows it. So what options are available to him to secure his position and power? War of course, an American specialty, during which engineered war Trump would assume executive powers and indefinitely delay proceedings and charges against him; any attempts by the Democrats to pursue or nail Trump would effectively be neutralised for an extended period. Indeed, a conveniently engineered war involving any US occupied nation would be very convenient for Trump at this time given the looming onslaught and operational paralysis he would face from the Democrats.

In the above context the Twitter exchange between Trump and Pakistan's new president Imran Khan should not be dismissed as just another rant/tweet. What provoked Trump to make accusations against Pakistan at this time? An interesting question given the circumstances; however, as always the machinations of the American deep state are as transparent as glass though it is hoped that the drastic measure of war is avoided, though desperate men do desperate things, particularly those suffering from NPD, which is such a self-involved psychological complaint sufferers would think nothing of sacrificing a nation to preserve themselves.

Indeed, if another war begins involving America there would be little doubt as to how and WHY it started.

See:

<https://www.truthdig.com/articles/are-we-about-to-face-our-gravest-constitutional-crisis/>

<https://consortiumnews.com/2018/11/20/pakistans-fight-against-extremism-at-home-rebuffed-by-trump/>

---

Inverse Times Open Publishing. <http://inversetimes.lingama.net/news/story-350.html>