

Democratic Rule -- A Refresher

by claire Saturday, Feb 9 2019, 7:11pm

international / prose / post

By definition democracy is rule by the people, MAJORITY; however, CLEARLY today the PEOPLE are 'missing in action,' literally.

The overwhelming majority of people globally, despise their traitorous, elite minority-serving governments, nonetheless, they fail to act to remedy this easily fixed situation. It simply amounts to majority DEMAND and if that fails then direct action to remove unrepresentative governments from power -- it really is that stark, simple and real, as no pretend democracy could oppose the will of the majority and get away with it for long.

The 'yellow vest' movement in France is exactly democracy in action. An elite serving political leader, Macron, flagrantly assumes that self-serving unrepresentative minority rule is legitimate and as a result has lost the confidence of the majority. Civil shutdowns of government apparatuses should therefore be the next stage when a leader so blatantly opposes the people and refuses to listen, after all, it is the PEOPLE that maintain all government departments.

Democratic rule is not astrophysics, it's plain and SIMPLE, perhaps too simple for some (American) confused populations. No population is obliged to tolerate an undemocratic status quo or leader that serves unrepresentative, minority elite interests, which is the case in ALL western 'democratic' nations today.

Democracy by definition and nature is participatory politics and if/when the people do not participate on a DAILY basis by monitoring their governments, democracy fails as has been the case world wide; in other words the PEOPLE have failed themselves. And if the people refuse to remedy a perverse status quo then clearly the usurpers would continue to rule to serve their own interests as is evident today with permanent wars for profit and massive environmental destruction for profit, I need not write reams on the sick nature of social reality today; are perpetual wars, environmental degradation, massive wealth disparities, inequality and debt-indentured slavery NORMAL? Certainly not in real democracies, which politics SHOULD favour the MAJORITY. So where is the irresistible MAJORITY today?

With very few exceptions, missing in action. The result is the sick reality we all face due primarily to people NOT exercising their inalienable prerogatives. So if you're looking to gripe or blame someone for the deplorable state of the WORLD -- it's plainly sick -- start with yourself.

Alternatively, you could, as history records, restore your respective nations to justice, fairness, PEACE and HARMONY, though the criminal elite hijackers would not surrender power without a fight, but no social force is stronger than the people, fact.

It is your inalienable RIGHT and OBLIGATION to do so otherwise you would forever lose y/our world and YOU KNOW IT.

Have a nice day!

