Fallen Feather

by toby Thursday, Jun 13 2019, 8:02am international / poetry / post > to be a fart in the night that nobody hears not even the farter is the life of a poet, this poet a bugle fashioned of brass emits the sound of fart how inappropriate an instrument to play in remembrance of young passionate fools dying for foreign monarchs and their bungling generals that feed boys to machine guns while they sip tea and discuss cricket.

poems are not read in silence like farts in the night they are symphonies of delight, horror and meaning where no meaning previously existed, a space always exists for poems not yet written; some thunder, others whimper but the message remains in the lost aspirations of readers projecting everything except what was/is intended the sound that claws its way thru ur soul, the stomach punch which numbs the diaphragm momentarily an Olympic swimmer that interjects tho this time I recorded the intrusion as it makes no difference to the outcome so I write this screaming silently in the night confident that no one will hear or see what it is to be completely misunderstood snow leopards do not exist in the tropics it's simply a case of the wrong place, time and wrong everything else yet it remains a poem written in the sparks and smoke of my campfire

Inverse Times Open Publishing. http://inversetimes.lingama.net/news/story-667.html