

The Political Status Quo is a Dead Man Falling to the Ground

by reg Tuesday, Jun 26 2018, 8:20am

international / prose / post

It's true, world populations are rejecting the thoroughly corrupt political status quo, that is, to be specific, voting for one of two major parties that serve the same minority interests, which is equivalent to a two horse one stable race, the stable owner always wins.

The lies of career politicians have worn so thin today they are as transparent as wet tissue. indeed, so too is the strength of the status quo. No one with half a brain wants to know, people want change, THEY WANT REPRESENTATION, not hollow promises.

The elite (stable owners) are aware of the situation and their ebbing influence over the masses, open revolt is not unlikely in some nations, which would catch and burn like a forest fire throughout the western and eastern worlds, make no mistake, though you would never see the mainstream news depict it as such as the mass media is an elite owned propaganda apparatus tat serves elite interests only.

Today it is universally understood that governments serve minority interests and not the population, the more people become aware, the more politicians lie, cheat and engage in every manner of duplicity, which makes them evermore transparent, the process is self-defeating but the elite have nowhere to turn as they MUST serve their own interests which hinges on exploiting the people of all nations, one way or another.

The status quo is failing at speed as I write; so to which desperate action did elite rulers turn? Distraction and concentrated media focus on an idiot leader, who is only capable of leading bigger idiots than himself, which are in essence of no account. Trump only 'cuts it' in dumbed-down, uneducated, moron America; however, the western media is hooked on Trump to the expence of real news that matters, like people everywhere rejecting the very tired status quo and turning away in droves from the two (owned) party system.

Ignorant to the extreme, buffoon Trump ONLY serves hopelessness, despondency and despair to the point where the psychological impact does indeed paralyse the will to pursue and demand reformation or engage in open, revolt; nonetheless, the number that know they having nothing to lose but their despair and suffering, far exceeds those left paralysed and bewildered by an ignoramus president of the most powerful nation on earth. In other words the shock Trump was supposed to deliver by simply being the idiot that he OBVIOUSLY is, failed to work, as those infuriated by the aggravation and absurdity of installing a narcissistic dunce in office outnumber those left in bewilderment.

Notice how the shaped 'news' covers this global crisis in confidence by labelling it nationalism, populist politics or some such other crap. NO, it is DISILLUSIONMENT with the status quo which is the cause and breeds unrest, not populist politics or any other perverse media presentation; watch closely and question the presentations of civil unrest and various crises around the globe and you too would easily see that the root cause behind it all is the antiquated model of CORRUPT minority, unrepresentative rule.

The outcome is easily predicted but not the course the outcome would take, nevertheless, be assured it's over for the thoroughly antiquated, corrupted status quo and unrepresentative minority rule. It only takes a spark in the right conditions (which now exist) to start a raging, uncontrollable forest fire.

Inverse Times Open Publishing. <http://inversetimes.lingama.net/news/story-82.html>