

The Absolute Necessity of Divesting Financial Elites

by reg Thursday, Nov 14 2019, 6:18pm

international / prose / post

The Bolivian CIA staged coup ousting democratically elected leader Morales from power is simply the latest manifestation of grossly illegal interference in the democratic process of a foreign sovereign nation, notwithstanding that huge sums of money support elite selected candidates for the presidency of the United States and other western 'democracies.' In other words 'freedom, liberty and democracy' are a laugh in y/our faces. Democracy and freedom are a charade.

Of course the current corruption machine is fuelled by large amounts of money, multi-millions sometimes billions of dollars, which results in the express service of those placed in power to those that placed them in power, doh!

Now consider how these elites legally avoid taxes by utilising tax havens etc, and ask yourself whether average people are able to utilise such means to avoid tax on their subsistence wages and you must come to the conclusion that if these tax avoiding mechanisms only serve the super rich then they were designed by the super rich in order to exploit.

Financial elites achieved this legal robbery of nations and populations by buying legislators and disseminating lies that tax avoidance by wealthy institutions is good for national economies, whose economy? The economies that serve the super rich while placing huge burdens on average people - is that fair, is that free, is that democracy at work? Not on your life! It is a game played by the super rich to their own advantage and the disadvantage of the masses as those without funds are left to survive in a CLEARLY uneven playing field, and who designed this appalling legal theft of nations and people, again the super rich.

So who among you deceives themselves that they live in a free, fair society because its gross injustices are obvious for anyone to see?

It also becomes apparent how available wealth is funnelled to those that already possess most of it, not to nations and people. Banks and large corporations with their immense wealth, based on printing currency from thin air and then taking the greater share which they use to effect various national and societal outcomes to THEIR advantage while in all cases creating intolerable poverty for exploited nations. Financial institutions are simply thieving machines/apparatuses today. The major offenders are the World Bank, IMF and large Wall Street banks, and if you imagine they do not serve the interests of moneyed elites you live in a dreamworld. The entire economic game today is clearly rigged, the fix is in and you lose in every respect. Social services do not profit these elites therefore they are left to collapse, infrastructure maintenance is also left to deteriorate, standards of living plummet while the super criminal rich take the mammoth share of available wealth which they use to maintain and increase their wealth and power. So which media dream world do you live in if you imagine this is representative democracy at work? Give me a break!

So now the question begs, why do you/we tolerate these easily remedied injustices, why do we allow the inequitable distribution of wealth, why do our bought governments support these rigged parasitic tax and other unfair structures while lying to the people that this clearly unfair system is good for economies - these are rhetorical questions as they've already been answered but the one question that remains unanswered is WHY do the masses tolerate these clearly unfair processes/systems and allow them to continue? I do not have an answer for that as the French, Russian Revolutions and many others were the results of super wealthy elites doing exactly what elites are doing today, exploiting everything and everyone to their advantage and as for the people, they can eat shit.

So if we have a distaste for violent revolt/overthrow to re-establish fair play and the equitable distribution of wealth, of course other means exist and the primary is to elect only candidates that represent the interests of the people and have real policy platforms to tax the rich and divest them of the majority of their immorally appropriated funds by fair tax legislation, exactly the same way but in reverse, elite thieves and robber barons divested nations and people of their hard earned wealth and labour, which proceeds should never have been allowed to be funnelled to benefit the few.

How gross and obvious does corruption and crime have to be before the masses remedy the situation? People are not obliged in any way to support the current bent system, however, they have been given rights to rectify any situation that does not serve the best interests of their nations and people via founding documents, constitutions and the political process. And if that process has been hijacked then it becomes a simple matter of popular DEMAND to reform it, and if that fails then recourse to direct action is legally allowed to regain hijacked republics and democracies -- and show me any constitution that allows minority, unrepresentative elites to rule because there are none!

The problem and solution are made clear, the outcome will be determined either by the existing criminal status quo or by those that reject gangster rule and are willing to act and remedy the gross injustices that today affect the entire world.

Populations of other nations are now taking to the streets to effect change as the situation has become intolerable, must western societies wait for the same conditions to occur in their nations before they act in support of themselves and other people world wide? I hope not.

The murdering CIA is an organisation working in the express service of elites; recently they arranged to financially 'capture' the new Ecuadorian leader with loans from the IMF and World Bank in order to have Assange's asylum status revoked, as exposing elites and their flawed government apparatuses cannot be allowed, then they attempted coups in Venezuela to appropriate the oil, which failed, but they succeeded in Bolivia, they never give up, but the masses have trouble maintaining focus on two words on a postage stamp thanks to the elite owned mass media of distraction, lies and propaganda.

Today very little is hidden as the above injustices and inequities are easily confirmed by anyone, I am merely serving up a portion on a platter for your convenience.

So what's it to be, victory for justice, fair play and the people, or victory for the parasitic, criminal elites and THEIR status quo? Things only change if they are affected by external forces and it is quite clear that internal forces act against the best interests of the PEOPLE and nation.

So again, the obvious, OUR lives are affected by our OWN ACTIONS and INACTION, as we should ALL be AWARE.

<https://caitlinjohnstone.com/2019/11/14/no-no-you-guys-this-us-backed-coup-is-perfectly-legitimate/>

